Social and Personal.

Hear the wall of the fashlonable New York woman, who declares in taking a look at the styles that:

"We are lost in a wilderness of frills and furbelows. We are overwhelmed with lace embroidered, with chiffen painted, with every known device for increasing the cost of materials. We see the lily painted, or its equivalent, everywhere, and with what result? True beauty often is lost. Distinction is apt to be found only where rebellion has been 'manifest, or reaction has set in and comparative simplicity is the result. Among a hundred models, exhibited at an importer's knowing this spring, just one lingers in my memory, and that one was white crepe de chine, made on simple lines, with the only trimming embroidery worked onto the material and I do not believe that the experience is mine alone.

"At a recent opening there was heard a sigh followed by, 'Oh, dear, is everything so fussy?' the renark coming from a woman whose own gown bespoke wealth and all that comes thereof, and no doubt countless other visitors felt, the criticsm if they did not utter it.

"To be tastefully dressed is every woman's duty. To do credit to herself and to her husband shoulg be her aim. But there are certain things that belong to the owners of bis purses that are unattalnable without, unless one sacrifice far better things in order to procure them, yet which often are striven after ns If they were indeed pearls of great price.

"If young girls could be brought to price.

"If young girls could be brought to see that simplicity suits them as nothing else can, if mothers would set before their daughters the truth that no raiment, no matter how fine, is worth the price of exhausted nerves, of everstrained energies, of demand upon the family, pursa that means a tense strain, we would become a happier race, and, I think, a more beautiful one.

"We are continually being told that the American woman is the handsomest in the world. We do wear our gowns well, we do possess a certain distinction, but not a fareigner comes among us who is not shocked by our exhaustive ways and who could not teach us lessons of spose. How much of this is due to the struggle to keep up the pace set by the wealthy few. I am not prepared to say, but that greater simplicity, combined with a true sense of beauty, would mean liberation, along the line of dress at least, I am sure.

"Handwork of all sorts is a craze. Open work embroidery, of the sort our grandmothers did so well, is the latest and smartest of all things. A simple linen gown becomes transformed when touches are added, yet the work is by no means either exhaustive or exacting. The very newest stocks are made with the clerical tab at the front and are of linen, all one mass of work. As yet they are shown by the most exclusive shops only, and bring a big price, but the work is rapid and quite within the power of any deft girl or woman, while such a finish to the plainest walst means distinction at once.

"It is to be a season of shirt waist suits. The odd walst will hold for certain uses, as it always mist, but the drers made with plaited skirt and shirt whist to match is to be a feature of the coming season. We have had it before, to be sure, but always in heavier stuffs or with fancy walsts. This year the newest and smartest are of dimity or lewn, and the walsts are made in talior style, with skirts platted and finished with a hem. They launder perfectly, if carefully shrunken before cutting, and are supremely smart if cut and fitted wills f in plaits below a yoke that is of sheer muslin, inset with lace and unlined, and the full sleeves include plaited extensions that are arranged over the shoulder seams and give the droop of shoulder so important to 1830 effect. With each gown is worn a deep girdle of soft silk. In color, in line, in texture, they are a delight—what more could be accomplished had their cost been treble what it was? Believe me, characteristics such as these are good for all time, and are never really out of date. Where they exist the result is good; where they are lacking it is had, and you will find that the greatest artists in design never lose sight of the fact.

But O heart! heart! O the bleeding drops of red, Where on the deck my Captain lies, Fallen cold and dead.

O Captain! My Captain! rise up and hear the bells; Rise up—for you the flag is flung—for you the bugle trills, For you bouquets and ribbon'd wreaths—for you the shores acrowding, For you they call, the swaying mass, their eager faces turning; Hear Captain! dear father!

This arm beneath your head!
It is some dream that on the deck, You've fallen cold and dead.

My Captain does not answer me, his lips are pale and still, My father does not feel my arm, he has no pulse nor will, The ship is anchor'd safe and sound, its voyage closed and done, From fearful trip the victor ship comes in with object won;

Exult O shores, and ring O bells!
But I with mournful tread,
Walk the deck my Captain lies Fallen cold and dead,

DRAWS FIRE FROM THE ADVOCATE

For First Time Mentions Rejection by Baltimore Conference, Will be Competitor.

In its current issue the Christian Ad-In its current issue the Christian Advocate makes its first editorial reference to the recent setback it received at the hands of the Baltimore Conference, which rejected the paper as its organ. The Advocate, which has been called the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate, announces its policy for the future, and indicates that it will be an active competitor in the Baltimore field, notwithstanding the step taken by the conference. The name will probably not be The name will probably not be "So the Advocate Publishing Company," says the editorial, "will endeavor to hold all its Baitlimore Conference subscribers by glving to them what they need in a weekly religious newspaper. Surely, no one can expect anything else, and to do this is not indicative of discourtesy or hostility to the paper which has been projected, or to the movement. Should the new paper be started, we expect to accord to it the same treatment which, under similar circumstances, we would have the right to expect, but that does not mean that the Advocate will not be made as attractive and as serviceable as possible to its readers." "So the Advocate Publishing Company," not mean that the Advocate will not be made as attractive and as serviceable as possible to its readers."

Concerning the action of the conference in rejecting its former organ, the Advocate says:

"The remarkable, perhaps unprecedented, scene at the executive session of the conference did not alter in any respect the principles involved. The treatment of the question of the establishment of a new paper, the argument and the appeals in favor of such action cannot possibly be appreciated by any one who was not present at the time. It would require a more graphic pen than that of the editor to bring the scene in its right relations before the minds of our readers, and could he draw the picture true to life, our readers would hardly believe the picture to be correct. It is sufficient to say that the methods adopted and the arguments presented, although presented by men who have been prominent in the conference for years, were endorsed by a bare majority of one, the count vote being 70 to 71 in favor of the appointment of a committee to arrange for the publication of a new paper." for the publication of a new

Beware of our imitators!

We are the only distillers in this country selling direct to consumers. Like every success, we have imitators who "claim" to be distillers. They are not distillers and have no connection with a distillery. For proof, you need not take our word. Just see government reports. They are simply dealers, and can "doctor" their whiskey as much as they like and call it any age, for unfortunately the government does not control dealers as it does distillers. Now, these dealers are in business for profit, so when they offer eight to twelve-year-old-whiskey for the same or less money than we, as distillers, can sell seven-year-old, the inference is plain. Their whiskey is not the age they claim and is adulterated and watered. The cheaper they sell, the more water and adulteration you get. Beware of initiators. If you want honest whiskey direct from our own distillery to you, with all its original strength, richness and flavor, carrying a UNITED STATES REGISTERED DISTILLER'S GUARANTEE of PURITY and AGE and saving the dealers enormous profits, then accept our offer, which is backed by a company with a capital of $500,000.00 paid in full, and the proud reputation of thirty-six years of continuous success. We have over a quarter of a million satisfied customers. Your money back if you're not satisfied.

SPECIAL NOTICE—A HAYNER QUART is a full quart, an honest quart, four to the gallon. The so-called "quarts" of other high-grade whiskies require five to the gallon. We give full measure, 20 per cent more than others, reducing our price just that much. If you don't want 4 quarts yourself, get a friend to join you. Write our nearest office and do it NOW.

Mrs. Frank W. Danner Alleges That Her Brother-in-Law Struck Her.

A case, unfortunate, but of more than usual interest, because of the prominence of all concerned, came up in the Police Court yesterday. Mrs. Mary S. Danner, wife of Mr. Frank W. Danner, the well known insurance agent, and daughter of Mr. Howard Swineford, equady as well known in in-surance circles, charges her brother-in-law, Mr. William A. Danner, with strik-law, Mr. William A. Danner, with striking her.

At the suggestion of Mr. Harry Smith, counsel for the accused, the case went over for several days.

The trouble, it is alleged, arose over the removal of the husband of Mrs. Danner to the Retreat for the Sick for treatment during his present illness. It was said that Mrs. Danner objected to the removal of Mr. Danner and his brother desired the removal. It was about this that Mrs. Danner claims she was struck by her brother-in-law.

It was reported from the hospital last night that Mr. Danner was getting along nicely.
